

Something Funny Happened Today...

Today, my favorite pen sprouted legs, arms, and fur! I pinched myself to make sure it wasn't a dream and it hurt! I looked back at my pen as it started to walk around. It jumped off my desk and grew wings! It flew out of my room and down the hall and just then, I heard a scream from the kitchen. I ran down the hall and looked into the kitchen to see my mother hiding behind the counter, screaming, with the dining table and the chairs walking around! I spotted my pen in the kitchen too. That's when I heard my mother say "Get out of bed and get ready for school!" But, how could she, she was still hiding behind the counter, screaming. That's when I woke up and realized it was a dream. I got up and changed, thinking about my dream. As I got ready for school, I realized my favorite pen was missing. I looked up just in time to see fur and a pair of wings swoosh through my open window. Was it really a dream? I guess I'll never know.